MARINE

Customs Inspector Neill brought about the arrest of Robert O. Parker, storekeeper of the steamship Manchuria, on Friday afternoon, on a charge of smuggling. Parker was caught red-handed, having wrapped nearly a roll of silk worth about $50 about his body beneath his street clothing. Parker had a somewhat puffy look as he came down the gangway, and the Customs Inspector held him up. A search of his person told the story. The man was turned over to U. S. Marshal Hendry and the Pacific Mail people put up a bond of $1000 for his appearance. He was then permitted to travel with his steamer. F. Klamp and S. Schultze are his sureties. The case is set for hearing before Commissioner Mailing on October 6.
